—Captain James Speed, the prince among railroad men, polite, affable and atten-tive, has now the handsomest offices in the among railroad men, politic, affable and attentive, has now the handsomest offices in the southwest, and the most eligibly located. They have been fitted up at great expense, with all the modern appliances and furniture usual in well-conducted railroad ticket-offices, and compare favorably with any of our banking institutions. The counter is a model of solidity and beauty, and the ticket-holder, as we call it, where friend James has the documents for any part of the continent strung in rows and arranged alphabetically, is as handsome a piece of furniture as any private dwelling can boast of. Besides these necessary articles, there are not wanting handsome deaks and beautiful carpets and matting, and the walls are ornamented with many of those handsome glass rosters, as we may term them, so popular with the railroad fraternity. In a room adjoining, where Captain Forbes, Captain Gibson, and Captain Ed. Hart, are ever busy with the freight-department, there may be seen the same neathess and coucles arrange. the freight-department, there may be seen the same neatness and concise arrange ment, and Sel Howell, the indefatigable and tireless passenger-agent, the indefatigable and tireless passenger-agent, shares with Captain Speed a portion of his office. Here you can get lickets for any part of the country—to Main or Texas, to the gulf, or to California; and not only that, you can ask for any inforand not only that, you can ask for any infor-mation about railroads, and be certain of a polite reply, and ladies, especially, are sure of prompt attention at the hands of one of the best-informed and truest gentlemen in the business. The northeast corner of Main and Madison streets is to be more famous than ever, now that Captain Speed has located there. He will advertise it in every direction, for none who buy tickets from him will fail to remember him as the model railroad tick-et-agent of the Union—conscientious in the discusrge of duty, and true in every relation of life.

NOTICE.

The board of managers of Leath or-phan asylum will hold their regular monthly meeting in the First Cumberland Presbyte-rian church, Court street, Monday morning, February 9th, at eleven o'clock. By order of the board, DAVID WALK, Secretary. THERE are some obstinate coughs which seem to resist almost every medicine that can be brought to bear against them. Every little change in the weather seems to aggravate the unpleasant symptoms, which are for almost a lifetime a source of annoyance. Not infrequently the origin of this trouble is in a torpid or inactive condition of the lining membranes of the air-passages, which thus do not secrete in sufficient quantity the moisture necessary to keep them pliant. The dry condition which ensues is a continued source of irritation. In all such cases Mansfield's Hungarian Balsam of Life will be found a panacea. This wonderful medicine has most remarkable powers as an expectorant; is soothing and healing, will stop the paroxysms of coughing very readily, loos-THERE are some obstinate coughs the paroxysms of coughing very readily, loosen up the tough phiegm which accumulates in the throat, and thus gives quick relief. This disease is difficult to cure, but we have heard of very many cases of it that have been cured completely by Mansfield's Hungarian Balsam of Life.

Memphis can boast as many of this class of business men, now prominent in their branches of trade and industry, perhaps, as any city in the world in proportion to population and advantages, and we venture to say more than a vast majority of inland cities of this continent, but we know of no one individual to whom the caption of this article more significantly applies than to Charles N Erich, the importer and dealer in glass and chinaware. Mr. Erich was liberally educated in commercial pursuits in Germany, the land of his nativity, whence he emigrated to this city in 1854. Arriving here when Memphis was in comparative infancy, a stranger and in a strange land, he conceived the idea that he would bend his efforts to the acquirement of a trade, and entered regularly upon a term of apprenticeship in the Memphis Arpkal, printing establishment, then under the management of John B. McClanahan and B. F. Dill. By close application to business, at the end of the first year he had acquired a wonderful proficiency in his chosen profession, and up to the year 1857, by careful husbanding of his small earnings, he had accumulated a little capital which he invested in the retail grocery business, to which he applied himself closely and with marked success until 1859, when he was enabled to change from the sanail business, which was really the beginning of his commercial career in this city, to that of retail dealer in glass and queensware, in which he rose graduality, and step by step, until in 1862, he bought out the interest of Mr. T. J. Hunt in the firm of Hunt & Lioyd, in the same business, and under the style of Erich & Lloyd continued to do an extensive and increasing business, until 1857, when the firm of Erich & Lloyd was dissolved, the latter gentleman associating himself with Messrs. Eastland and Gifbert, under the firm of Eastland, Lloyd & Gilbert, who fitted up, at great expense. and southwest, his business has grown to a magnitude requiring more room and better appointments to facilitate in supplying the increasing demand. This he has succeeded in acquiring by "buying out" his neighbors, when, with the beautiful arrangements made by his predecessors, and the additions making and to be made by himself, Mr. Erich will soon have fitted up the best appointed and most magnificent glass and queensware establishment in the world, ecupsing in point of elegance anything either in Paris, London or New York. The fixtures for Mr. Erich's new establishment cost originally twenty thousand dollars, which give some idea of its magnificence. He continues to import, as he has done since 1850, directly from European factories, making a trip each year himself, and superintending in person the selecting packing and shipping of every article for his immense establishment here. He expects to make a trip the coming spring, and on his return will have replenished his already large stock with the most complete assortment ever exhibited on the American continent. Especial attention is called to the excellent and well-known firm of Johnston & Vance, dealers in gentlemen's clothing, overcoats, shirts and all manner of under-wear, at No. 305 Main street, under the Peabody hotel. These gentlemen mean what they say, and, in offering clothing, such as no other house in Memphis keeps, at greatly reduced prices, they are induced to do so in order to reduce their immense stock, so as to make room for a spring supply. Their stock of overcoats is well assorted, and embraces the latest and most fashionable styles. But they have to be sold, and for this reason they are offered at half price. Think of this, reader, and you will buy an overcoat from Johnston & Vance at the earliest opportunity. All of their goods were selected at the warehouses of manufacturers, and or durability, neatness, finish and style cannot one equaled. Young gentlemen who wish to purchase pants, coats, vests, overcoats, shirts, gloves, cravats, scarris, etc., of a superior quality and for the smallest price, should go immediately to the popular house of Johnston & Vance, whom we cheerfally commend to the public as gentlemen that will give entire satisfaction in all their business transactions.
